Plaintiffs currently license their NFL photos at issue in this lawsuit through AP.

NATURE OF THE ACTION

18. This is an action for copyright infringement and related claims brought by Plaintiffs against Defendants for unauthorized uses of Plaintiffs' copyrighted photographs.

19. For many years, Plaintiffs obtained media credentials – either through their agents, Getty Images and AP, or directly from the NFL's member teams via the NFL's in-house photo services department which operated as a division of NFL Properties, Inc. – to photograph events for the NFL and its individual member teams.

20. Plaintiffs collectively have photographed hundreds, if not thousands, of NFL regular season games, NFL playoff games, NFL team practices, and other NFL functions. Over their careers, each Plaintiff has amassed a large collection or "library" of NFL-related photographs. Together, Plaintiffs have taken literally hundreds of thousands of NFL-related photographs.

21. Plaintiffs primarily photographed NFL games under so-called speculation agreements (or "on spec"), meaning that instead of being paid flat fees (also called "day rates") for their work they retained ownership of the copyrights in the photos that they took during an event and then earned income by licensing their photos. This action involves only those photos that Plaintiffs created "on spec" and thus pertains only to those photos in which Plaintiffs retained and currently own copyrights; this action does not involve any photos that Plaintiffs occasionally may have created under day-rate or work-for-hire agreements. All allegations herein related to Plaintiffs' photographs refer only to those photographs that Plaintiffs created "on spec" and to which they own copyrights.

22. Although Plaintiffs' license the photos that they shot "on spec" through third-party licensing agents (formerly NFL Photos and then Getty Images and currently AP), they never transferred their copyrights in these photos to their agents. Rather, as Plaintiffs' contributor agreements expressly provided, they retained sole and exclusive ownership of all copyrights in these photos.

23. This action concerns the NFL Defendants' rampant, willful, and continued misuse of photographs to which Plaintiffs own copyrights. This action also involves Getty Images' and AP's illegal and unethical misconduct which permitted, encouraged, and contributed to the NFL Defendants' infringements.

VENUE AND JURISDICTION

24. Jurisdiction for Plaintiffs' claims lies with the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York pursuant to the Copyright Act of 1976, 17 U.S.C. §§ 101, et seq., 28 U.S.C. § 1331 (conferring original jurisdiction "of all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States"), and 28 U.S.C. § 1338(a) (conferring original jurisdiction over claims arising under any act of Congress relating to copyrights).

25. This Court has jurisdiction over Plaintiffs' state and common law claims under 28 U.S.C. § 1967 because those claims are so related to the federal claims that they form part of the same case or controversy.

26. Venue is proper in this Court under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) since the alleged misconduct by Defendants giving rise to the claims asserted herein occurred in this District and 28 U.S.C. § 1400(b) since Defendants infringed Plaintiffs' copyrights in this District.

FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

27. Beginning in approximately 1965, the NFL formed and operated a division called NFL Photographic Services or "NFL Photos" which effectively operated as an "in-house" photo library and licensing agency. Through NFL Photos, the NFL actively solicited photography from and hired freelance photographers in order to expand the NFL's brand, including through the licensing of photos to media outlets and commercial entities, as well as by publishing its own magazines, newsletters, books, public relations and promotional materials.

28. NFL Photos operated much like the more well-known NFL Films, except with an emphasis on "still" photography rather than film and video footage. One crucial difference, however, is that while the NFL generally owns the copyrights to the film and video footage now controlled by NFL Films, the NFL typically does not own copyrights in the still photos that it uses because the vast majority of photos are created by freelance photographers working "on spec."

29. Beginning in approximately 2003, the NFL transitioned away from an "in-house" photo library to licensing arrangements with established stock photography agencies, including Getty Images and WireImage. When Getty Images purchased WireImage's parent, MediaVast, in 2007, Getty Images obtained exclusive commercial licensing rights for NFL-related photos. Getty Images retained the exclusive NFL licensing rights until 2009.

30. At various times during this period, each Plaintiff entered into a "contributor agreement" with Getty Images pursuant to which Getty Images acted as Plaintiffs' agents and facilitated the licensing of their works, including but not limited to Plaintiffs' NFL collections.

31. In or about 2009, the NFL accepted new bids for the exclusive right to grant commercial licenses related to NFL-related photographic content. The NFL eventually selected AP's bid and the NFL and AP subsequently entered into an exclusive licensing agreement.

32. As a direct consequence of the NFL's decision to grant an exclusive license to AP, Plaintiffs lost the ability to sell higher-value commercial licenses, as opposed to editorial licenses, through Getty Images. Thus, if Plaintiffs wished to continue offering commercial licenses for their NFL content, they were forced to transition their NFL collections to AP.

33. This option presented difficulties, however, because Plaintiffs also own the copyrights to and license other sports-related content, including photographs of Major League Baseball (“MLB”) and National Collegiate Athletic Association (“NCAA”) games and events, and Getty Images had exclusive licensing deals and/or significant licensing partnerships with these entities, including MLB.

34. In a blatant attempt to exploit this dilemma, Getty Images threatened to remove Plaintiffs’ other sports content from its distribution networks and/or terminate its relationship with Plaintiffs entirely if they did not agree to continue licensing their NFL content through Getty Images even after its commercial licensing deal with the NFL expired. Getty Images also made clear that it would not “welcome back” any contributors who moved their NFL content to AP should Getty Images ever regain the rights to license NFL content in the future.

35. Because certain Plaintiffs had significant non-NFL content at Getty Images, including significant MLB and NCAA photo collections, Getty Images’ position forced Plaintiffs to make an impossible choice between losing commercial licensing opportunities for their NFL content by not going to AP or giving up commercial licensing opportunities for their non-NFL content by leaving Getty Images.

36. Plaintiffs Jasienski, Stluka, Spinelli, Witte, and Drapkin risked Getty Images’ wrath and moved their NFL content to AP beginning in 2009. Plaintiffs Lowrance and Boehm chose not to risk the loss of other licensing opportunities and thus kept their NFL content at Getty Images. As result, Plaintiffs Lowrance and Boehm lost significant and valuable licensing opportunities for their literally tens of thousands of NFL-related photos by leaving those images at Getty Images. Although Getty Images ultimately sub-licensed Lowrance's and Boehm's collections through AP, the number of sales of was significantly diminished and Plaintiffs were damaged because both agencies withheld their royalty rates.

37. Eventually, all Plaintiffs ended their relationships with Getty Images and entered into agreements to license their NFL content through AP. As a result, Plaintiffs have lost significant revenue due to the loss of licensing opportunities for their non-NFL content that resulted from the termination of their relationships with Getty Images.

38. Both Getty Images and AP represented and licensed Plaintiffs' photos at issue in this action on a "Rights Managed" basis meaning that the licenses sold by these agencies granted only limited usage rights to the customer/licensee. In addition, the license fees charged by the agencies were calculated based upon the scope of rights being granted, meaning that a license granting more usage rights required higher fees and a license granting more narrow usage rights required lower fees.

39. As the name suggests, Rights-Managed licensing also requires that the licensor (in this case, Getty Images and AP) track and manage the usage rights being granted to end users. This is crucial for several reasons, including that fees are directly linked to the usage rights being granted and also because the ability to subsequently grant high-value "exclusive" licenses depends on the licensor's ability to assure a prospective client that no other comparable rights have been granted to other customers, especially the prospective client's competitors.

40. Despite the fundamental obligations to license Plaintiffs' works according to these principles inherent in the Rights-Managed licensing model, including to track usage rights and also charge appropriate market value for each license, Plaintiffs recently discovered that both Getty Images and AP granted the NFL nearly unfettered access to Plaintiffs' photo collections and, either expressly or by inaction, allowed the NFL to make free or “complimentary” use of Plaintiffs’ copyrighted photos. In doing so, Getty Images and AP not only failed to charge the NFL appropriate market value for licenses to use thousands of Plaintiffs’ photos, they both also failed to monitor, track, or responsibly manage the NFL’s use of Plaintiffs’ photos. The failure of Getty Images and AP to track and monitor the NFL’s use of Plaintiffs’ photos severely undermines the future value of their works.

41. As a result of this misconduct by AP and Getty Images, the NFL was able to copy, display, publish, and even sublicense, including to Defendant Replay Photos, literally thousands of Plaintiffs’ copyrighted works without ever paying any compensation to Plaintiffs and without ever reporting the uses it has made of Plaintiffs’ works.

42. The NFL has earned substantial revenue through publishing (including in NFL Magazine and other NFL-controlled publications) and also licensing or selling (including through the NFL Photo Store and Replay Photos) copies of photographs owned exclusively by Plaintiffs for which the NFL never obtained a valid license or paid appropriate licensing fees.

43. When the NFL entered into its licensing agreement with Getty Images, it was not granted free or “complimentary” use of photographic content. Nor was the NFL granted a “Royalty Free” license to use photos owned by Plaintiffs. Indeed, because Getty Images did not own the content in Plaintiffs’ image collections and also because Plaintiffs’ photos were submitted to Getty Images as Rights Managed images, Getty Images lacked authority to grant unfettered usage rights or complimentary and indefinite use licenses to the NFL without obtaining separate and express permission from Plaintiffs for each such “complimentary” license or use.

44. Plaintiffs' contributor agreements with Getty Images precluded Getty Images from granting usage rights at no cost and Getty Images' own standard terms and conditions for usage licenses pertaining to Rights Managed photos prohibited such use.

45. When the NFL entered into its exclusive licensing agreement with AP in 2009, that agreement also did not include a complimentary license to the NFL and certainly did not grant the NFL free and unfettered use of Plaintiffs' content.

46. Like their prior contributor agreements with Getty Images, Plaintiffs' "Contributor Photographer Agreements" or "Contributor NFL Photographer Agreements" with AP also did not permit AP to grant free and unfettered licenses to any customers, including the NFL.

47. Significantly, Plaintiffs' contributor agreements with AP also did not grant AP authority to pursue infringements or negotiate settlements on behalf of Plaintiffs. On the contrary, each Plaintiff's contributor agreement with AP expressly provided that the photographer retained all copyrights in his work, which would include the exclusive right to pursue claims for infringements.

48. Despite these restrictions and limits on AP's authority, Plaintiffs discovered that AP was permitting the NFL to use Plaintiffs' photos without paying for any usage rights and without reporting usages to Plaintiffs on their royalty statements. Given AP's total lack of reporting of NFL usages, it is clear that AP did not make any effort to track or monitor the NFL's use of Plaintiffs' photos. To this date, AP has never identified which of the photos owned by Plaintiffs that it provided to the NFL or whether the NFL currently possesses high-resolution copies of the photos acquired from AP.

49. When Plaintiffs contacted the NFL to demand that it cease and desist using their copyrighted works without permission and without paying the requisite licensing fees, the NFL falsely represented that its 2009 contract with AP included an express license that allowed complimentary use of any NFL-related photos licensed by AP, including even the photos owned by Plaintiffs.

50. Because such a license would violate the express terms and fundamental purpose of Plaintiffs' agreements with AP, Plaintiffs contacted AP to inquire about the NFL's seemingly preposterous claim. As expected, AP denied the NFL's claim and assured Plaintiffs that not only did the 2009 agreement between AP and NFL not include such a license, but the AP was currently renegotiating its agreement with the NFL to address the widespread misuse of photos by the NFL.

51. Thereafter, AP agreed to allow Plaintiffs input into this negotiation process, and AP and Plaintiffs also began negotiating amendments to Plaintiffs' contributor agreements to allow the NFL very narrow, specific, and limited usage rights pertaining to Plaintiffs' works in exchange for specific consideration.

52. During these contract negotiations, AP inexplicably decided to grant the NFL a purported "license" that was complimentary and "Royalty Free" and "retroactive" to 2009. The AP made the unilateral decision to grant this purported "license" without ever advising Plaintiffs of its intention to do so, without their consent, and despite their express objections.

53. The clear purpose of the retroactive "license" granted to the NFL by AP was to release or extinguish the copyright infringement claims that Plaintiffs recently had brought to the NFL's attention and to attempt to insulate the NFL Defendants from liability for the copyright infringements identified herein and that are the subject of this action.

54. AP granted this retroactive “license” to the NFL under threats and coercive pressure by the NFL, including the threat of moving its exclusive license back to Getty Images, which also had submitted a bid to reacquire the NFL’s business.

55. Again, Plaintiffs’ contributor agreements with AP do not authorize AP to pursue infringements or settle claims on their behalf, and Plaintiffs never authorized AP to grant any release to any infringers and certainly not to do so without notifying Plaintiffs in advance and without Plaintiffs receiving any compensation.

56. Plaintiffs’ contributor agreements with the AP also include minimum royalty payments, typically set forth in Section 5.1 of each agreement, requiring AP to pay a minimum royalty payment per each photo sale. In other words, Plaintiffs’ contracts with AP expressly prohibit AP from granting “free” or “complimentary” usage rights to any licensee, including the NFL Defendants.

57. The 2012 agreement between the NFL and AP thus violates Plaintiffs’ agreements with AP and the purported retroactive/royalty-free/complimentary “license” granted therein is invalid.

58. The use of photographic works is one of the key ways that the NFL markets and promotes itself. The NFL, however, does not own the copyrights to the vast majority of the photographic content that it uses, including the works created by Plaintiffs. As such, the NFL must obtain licenses prior to using Plaintiffs’ works.

59. Despite being well aware that it does not own the copyrights to Plaintiffs’ works and its own 38-years of experience operating NFL Photos as a stock photo agency that managed the licensing of photos owned by its contributing photographers, the NFL systemically used thousands of Plaintiffs’ photos for promotional, marketing, and commercial purposes without a license or permission from Plaintiffs or their agents – that is until 2012 when the NFL leveraged its illegal monopoly to force AP to grant a retroactive/royalty-free/complimentary “license” to use Plaintiffs’ works for the clear purpose of hoping to avoid claims for copyright infringement.

60. The NFL exploited its singular control and illegal monopoly of the commercial licensing rights to NFL content to force Getty Images and now AP to grant the NFL unfettered access to Plaintiffs’ image libraries and to rob Plaintiffs of their rightful compensation for the uses the NFL has made, and continues to make, of their copyrighted works.

61. The NFL has been able to convince Plaintiffs’ licensing agents to allow this rampant and blatant exploitation of Plaintiffs’ works only because of its illegal monopoly over the commercial licensing rights to NFL content.

62. At the time the NFL and AP negotiated this purported “license,” both entities were well aware that Plaintiffs did not condone the free or complimentary use of their works by the NFL.

63. Despite Plaintiffs’ issuing repeated cease and desist demands, the NFL Defendants continue to use literally thousands of Plaintiffs’ photographic works to promote the NFL’s brand, sell NFL-related products, and enhance the NFL’s image in order to generate revenue both as an independent entity and on behalf of its thirty-two member clubs. The NFL Defendants’ unlicensed use of Plaintiffs’ copyrighted photos is broad and ongoing.

64. The NFL has used and continues to use hundreds of Plaintiffs’ photos on the NFL’s main website, NFL.com.

65. The NFL also has illegally exported copies of Plaintiffs’ works in order to copy and publish them on its international websites, including www.nfljapan.com and www.nflmexico.com and www.nfl.com/international.

66. The NFL also has copied and published Plaintiffs' works in printed publications, including NFL Magazine, the NFL's Super Bowl Programs, the NFL's Reports and Newsletters, and even in NFL regular season and playoff game programs. The NFL has used and continues to use Plaintiffs' photos on the NFL Network without ever paying for such use and without the uses being reported to Plaintiffs.

67. In a particularly egregious example, the NFL used a photograph of Aaron Rodgers to which Plaintiff Stluka owns sole and exclusive copyrights to promote Super Bowl XLV in Dallas by draping the image over a multi-story portion of the façades of the Omni Hotel and Cowboys Stadium without ever paying Plaintiff Stluka for these uses of his photo. (See Exhibit at Lines 25 & 26)

68. Attached hereto as Exhibits 1 to 7 are true and correct copies of recent screen captures from NFL.com showing the widespread use of Plaintiffs' works.

69. Although a very few number of the images included in Exhibit 1 through 7 were shot by Plaintiffs under "day rate" agreements for the NFL years ago, the vast majority of the astounding number of images currently being used by the NFL on its website were created by Plaintiffs "on spec" and they own sole and exclusive copyrights in these images.

70. Even those images for which Plaintiffs own all copyrights, the NFL has never paid any fees or compensation to Plaintiffs for these uses and none of these uses has ever been reported to Plaintiffs on any royalty report or otherwise.

71. Attached hereto as Exhibits 8 to 13 are spreadsheets identifying hundreds of unauthorized and infringing uses of the photos to which Plaintiffs own full copyrights. As these spreadsheets demonstrate, the NFL Defendants have used and are continuing to use photos to which Plaintiffs own all copyrights on NFL.com, NFLJapan.com, and the NFL Network.

72. Plaintiffs' copyright infringement claims relate to all uses identified in Exhibits 8 to 13, and the information contained in these exhibits is fully incorporated herein.

73. The NFL used and is using Plaintiffs' photos in various ways, including in conjunction with articles, as part of photo "essays," and also to create stand-alone photo "galleries." Attached hereto as Exhibit 14 is a true and correct copy of the main photo gallery page on NFL.com. Plaintiffs' photos are included in many dozens of the galleries. Attached hereto as Exhibit 15 are true and correct copies of screen captures from various photo galleries showing the use of Plaintiffs' photos.

74. Consistent with its practice of monetizing every possible interaction with its fan base, the NFL forces any visitor who views such photo "galleries" and "essays" to view advertisements and promotional materials after a pre-set number of "clicks" or photos viewed. Nevertheless, despite the plain commercial character and value of these uses of Plaintiffs' photos, the NFL has never paid any licensing fees to Plaintiffs, and certainly not the appropriate commercial licensing rates required for such uses.

75. As the screen captures attached as Exhibit 15 demonstrate, the photo "galleries" on NFL.com permit visitors access to large resolution copies of Plaintiffs' photos without appropriate copyright management information or protection against illegal copying. The NFL also encourages visitors to "tweet" on Twitter.com or "share" on Facebook.com copies of Plaintiffs' works, despite the fact that the NFL does not own the copyrights to these photos.

76. Certain photo galleries also include links that allow and encourage visitors to buy copies of the photos, including many of Plaintiffs' photos. The NFL sells copies of photographs directly to consumers through www.nflshop.com and also the "NFL Photo Store" located at www.nflphotostore.nfl.com. The photos that the NFL makes available for sale through NFL

Photo Store it also makes available for sale through Defendant Replay Photos. Attached hereto as Exhibit 16 are true and correct copies of screen captures showing numerous photos owned by Plaintiffs Spinelli, Boehm, Lowrance, Stluka, and Witte that currently are for sale at the NFL Photo Store. In each case, the NFL incorrectly claims that AP owns copyright in the photos being offered for sale when in fact Plaintiffs own the sole and exclusive copyrights in each photo. Once again, although the NFL and Replay Photos are selling copies of Plaintiffs photos, typically for hundreds of dollars, the NFL has not paid any licensing fees, royalties, or other compensation to Plaintiffs for these uses.

77. That the NFL and Replay Photos have sold and continue to offer for sale copies of Plaintiffs' photos is particularly egregious given that AP, on behalf of the NFL, requested that Plaintiffs agree to amendments to their contributor agreements to allow such sales and Plaintiffs expressly rejected AP's request and did not agree to the proposed amendment to their contributor agreements. Nevertheless, AP apparently has authorized or allowed the NFL to use Plaintiffs' photos in this manner. These infringements are blatant and willful.

78. The NFL also is using Plaintiffs' photographs during broadcasts on its newly-launched NFL Network. Attached hereto as Exhibits 17 are true and correct copies of photos of the credits from recent broadcasts on the NFL Network demonstrating that the NFL Network used copies of Plaintiffs' photos during broadcasts. In each case, the NFL Network falsely claimed that its use of Plaintiffs' photos was "courtesy of" Plaintiffs when, in actuality, Plaintiffs never agreed to allow the NFL Network to use their photos and were unaware of any such use by the NFL until recently.

79. Because Getty Images and AP failed to monitor or track or report which photos were acquired by or provided to the NFL, Plaintiffs cannot yet determine the full scope of the NFL Defendants' use of their copyrighted works. The infringements identified in Exhibits 8 through 13 merely highlight that the NFL Defendants' unlicensed uses of Plaintiffs' photos is widespread and ongoing.

80. Because information regarding the full scope of the NFL's use of Plaintiffs' photos remains in the Defendants sole possession, it is clear that the infringements identified herein and in Exhibits 8 through 13 are not exhaustive and it is clear that the NFL certainly used many additional photos owned by Plaintiffs without a license and without paying necessary license fees.

81. The NFL has realized substantial revenues from displaying and licensing photographic content, including but not limited to fees paid by commercial entities selling copies of Plaintiffs' photos and also websites that use NFL-related photos in advertisements and to promote products, such as fantasy football leagues.

COUNT I: COPYRIGHT INFRINGEMENT AGAINST ALL DEFENDANTS

82. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege each of the above allegations as if set forth fully herein.

83. The information included in the attached Exhibits is incorporated fully herein.

84. The foregoing acts by Defendants infringed Plaintiffs' copyrights.

85. Plaintiffs created and own sole and exclusive copyrights in and to the creative works identified in Exhibits 8 to 13.

86. Plaintiffs also own copyrights to additional photos used and being used by the NFL Defendants without permission or a valid license. Because the information regarding the full scope of Defendants' use of Plaintiffs' photos remains in Defendants' sole possession, Plaintiffs cannot currently ascertain all uses of the works to which they own copyright.

87. Plaintiffs' copyrights in and to photographs that are the subject of this action, including all photos identified in Exhibits 8 to 13, have been registered with the United States Copyright Office.

88. The NFL Defendants and Replay Photos infringed Plaintiffs' copyrights by copying, publishing, displaying, exporting, and otherwise using and exploiting photographic works to which Plaintiffs own all copyrights without a license.

89. Any purported retroactive or complimentary or royalty-free "license" that the NFL may claim to have obtained from AP is invalid, including because AP did not have authority to grant such a "retroactive" license.

90. At the time the NFL negotiated such a retroactive or complimentary or royalty-free "license" with AP, the NFL was aware that Plaintiffs did not authorize or consent to the NFL's complimentary use of their photos and that Plaintiffs objected to AP's allowing such complimentary use of their photos.

91. Even after Plaintiffs expressly informed the NFL that Plaintiffs considered any implied license from AP or Getty Images or any retroactive "license" to be invalid and repeatedly demanded that the NFL cease and desist using their photos without paying for an appropriate license, the NFL Defendants continued using Plaintiffs' photos and continue to use their photos to this day.

92. The NFL Defendants also infringed Plaintiffs' copyrights by illegally exporting their photos, including by copying and publishing them on NFLJapan.com and NFLMexico.com.

93. The NFL Defendants also infringed Plaintiffs' copyrights by providing copies of Plaintiffs' photos to third parties, including Defendant Replay Photos, and such uses of Plaintiffs' photos by Defendant Replay Photos also are unlicensed and infringing.

94. Plaintiffs' "Contributing Photographer Agreements" with AP specifically provided that Plaintiffs' retained all copyrights in their photos and that the license granted to AP was non-exclusive.

95. As such, AP had no authority to pursue copyright infringements or settle infringement claims on behalf of Plaintiffs.

96. Despite this restriction on AP's licensing rights, AP intentionally granted the NFL a purported "license" that was retroactive and intended to release or extinguish Plaintiffs' copyright claims against the NFL.

97. AP granted this purported "license" without consulting with Plaintiffs and over their clear objections.

98. By doing so, AP exceeded its limited rights to grant prospective licenses to Plaintiffs' works and thereby infringed their copyrights, including Plaintiffs' exclusive right to pursue infringement claims related to the unauthorized uses of their photos.

99. Defendants' infringements and unauthorized use of Plaintiffs' copyrighted works was willful, intentional, and/or reckless.

100. Plaintiffs seek all damages recoverable under the Copyright Act, including statutory or actual damages, including Defendants' profits attributable to the infringements.

101. Plaintiffs also seek all attorneys' fees and any other costs incurred in litigating this matter.

COUNT II: VICARIOUS COPYRIGHT INFRINGEMENT
AGAINST GETTY IMAGES & ASSOCIATED PRESS

102. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege each of the above allegations as if set forth fully herein.

103. The foregoing acts by Getty Images and AP constitute vicarious copyright infringement.

104. Getty Images and AP were aware or should have been aware of the NFL's extensive copying and publishing of Plaintiffs' photos.

105. Despite their responsibility to act as Plaintiffs' agents, Getty Images and AP ignored the NFL's misconduct and turned a "blind eye" to the NFL's infringements.

106. Getty Images and AP directly contributed to the NFL's infringements, including by permitting unfettered access to Plaintiffs' works and making the intentional decision not to monitor or track the NFL's uses and not to require that the NFL report back all uses of Plaintiffs' photos.

107. Despite their ability to do so, Getty Images and AP also failed to stop the NFL's infringements even after Plaintiffs brought the infringements to their attention.

108. Getty Images' and AP's misconduct was willful, intentional, and/or reckless.

109. Plaintiffs seek all damages recoverable under the Copyright Act, including statutory or actual damages, including Getty Images' and AP's profits attributable to the infringements.

110. Plaintiffs also seek all attorneys' fees and any other costs incurred in litigating this matter.

COUNT III: CONTRIBUTORY COPYRIGHT INFRINGEMENT
AGAINST GETTY IMAGES & ASSOCIATED PRESS

111. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege each of the above allegations as if set forth fully herein.

112. The foregoing acts by Getty Images and AP constitute contributory copyright infringement.

113. Getty Images and AP were aware or should have been aware of the NFL's copying and publishing of Plaintiffs' photos.

114. Despite their responsibility to act as Plaintiffs' agent, Getty Images and AP permitted, allowed, caused, contributed to, and/or encouraged the NFL to continuing using Plaintiffs' photos without paying the requisite license fees or reporting such uses to Plaintiffs.

115. Getty Images and AP directly contributed to the NFL's infringements, including by permitting unfettered access to Plaintiffs' works and intentionally not monitoring or tracking the NFL's activities.

116. Despite their ability to do so, Getty Images and AP also failed to stop the NFL's infringements even after Plaintiffs brought the infringements to their attention.

117. Getty Images' and AP's misconduct was willful, intentional, and/or reckless.

118. Plaintiffs seek all damages recoverable under the Copyright Act, including statutory or actual damages, including Getty Images' and AP's profits attributable to the infringements.

119. Plaintiffs also seek all attorneys' fees and any other costs incurred in litigating this matter.

COUNT IV: BREACH OF CONTRACT
AGAINST GETTY IMAGES & ASSOCIATED PRESS

120. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege each of the above allegations as if set forth fully herein.

121. Getty Images and AP breached their contracts with Plaintiffs through the foregoing acts.

122. Plaintiffs' contributor agreements with AP specifically provided that Plaintiffs' retained all copyrights in their photos, including the exclusive right to pursue claims for infringements.

123. As such, AP had no authority to grant the NFL a retroactive "license" intended to release Plaintiffs' copyright claims against the NFL.

124. Plaintiffs' contributor agreements with Getty Images and AP also required each agency to charge license fees to customers and then pay a percentage of that fee to Plaintiffs as a royalty.

125. By permitting the NFL unfettered access to and complimentary use of Plaintiffs' works, Getty Images and AP breached their obligations under their agreements with Plaintiffs.

126. Plaintiffs' agreements with Getty Images and AP also required each agency to report all client usages on a periodic royalty statement.

127. Getty Images and AP breached this obligation by failing to track or monitor the NFL's use of Plaintiffs' photos and failing to report to Plaintiffs any purported "licenses" granted to NFL.

128. Plaintiffs seek all damages recoverable against Getty Images and AP under New York and/or Washington law.

COUNT V: BREACH OF FIDUCIARY DUTY
AGAINST GETTY IMAGES & ASSOCIATED PRESS

129. Plaintiffs repeat and re-allege each of the above allegations as if set forth fully herein.

130. Getty Images and AP each had a responsibility to act as Plaintiffs' agents and yet each breached its fiduciary obligations to Plaintiffs through the acts, omissions, and misconduct detailed herein.

131. Getty Images and AP represented Plaintiffs as their licensing agents and each defendant held itself out to third parties as Plaintiffs' agent.

132. Getty Images and AP thus were obliged to deal with Plaintiffs fairly and in good faith and not to act in a manner that was against their interests.

133. Getty Images and AP breached their fiduciary obligations by failing to track and monitor the NFL's use of their photos and failing to charge the NFL appropriate licensing fees for using Plaintiffs' photos.

134. AP also breached its fiduciary obligations by attempting to release or extinguish Plaintiffs' copyright claims against the NFL, particularly by doing so without any compensation for Plaintiffs.

135. Even if AP had authority to negotiate a settlement of Plaintiffs' claims against the NFL, AP's own business dealings with the NFL created an intractable conflict of interest and thus AP should have refrained from exercising such authority or should have informed Plaintiffs of the conflict and included them in its negotiations with the NFL.

136. Getty Images and AP also breached their fiduciary obligations by refusing Plaintiffs' repeated demand for information regarding which photos the NFL had downloaded from each agency's website and other systems.

137. Getty Images and AP refused to provide this information to Plaintiffs in order to conceal its own misconduct and protect the NFL Defendants.

138. The conduct of Getty Images and AP reveals that each defendant acted in its own selfish interest or the interest of the NFL, which was a customer, rather than fulfilling its duties as Plaintiffs' agent.

139. Plaintiffs seek all damages recoverable against Getty Images AP under New York and/or Washington and/or common law.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully pray for judgment on their behalf and for the following relief:

1. A preliminary and permanent injunction against the NFL Defendants and Replay Photos from copying, displaying, distributing, and/or selling Plaintiffs' works or any publications or other materials that include Plaintiffs' works, and requiring the NFL Defendants and Reply Photos to deliver to the Court for destruction or other appropriate disposition all relevant materials, including digital files of Plaintiffs' photographs and all copies of any infringing materials that included Plaintiffs' works that are in the control or possession or custody of the NFL Defendants or Replay Photos;

2. From all Defendants, all allowable damages under the Copyright Act, including, but not limited to, statutory or actual damages, including damages incurred as a result of Plaintiffs' loss of licensing revenue and Defendants' profits attributable to the infringements of Plaintiffs' rights;

3. All allowable damages caused by and/or resulting from Getty Images' and AP's breaches of contract and violation of their fiduciary obligations, including actual damages and punitive damages if available;

4. Plaintiffs' full costs, including litigation expenses, expert witness fees, interest, and any other amounts authorized under law, and attorneys' fees incurred in pursuing and litigating this matter;

5. Any other relief authorized by law, including punitive and/or exemplary damages; and

6. For such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.
